Overview

ABSTRACT

The Partnership for Economic Inclusion (PEI) Landscape Survey 2019 - 2020 aimed to provide a comprehensive inventory of ongoing economic inclusion programs, or those that are in the development pipeline. For the purpose of the PEI Landscape Survey 2019 - 2020, the PEI management team (PEIMT) defined economic inclusion programs as multidimensional interventions that support and enable households to achieve sustainable livelihoods and increase their incomes and assets, while building human capital and promoting social inclusion.

To map the universe of economic inclusion programs, the PEIMT reviewed the World Bank financing portfolio as well as external sources. The first stage of the World Bank portfolio scan involved manually reviewing ongoing and pipeline programs from the Social Protection and Jobs (SPJ) Global Practice, listed in the World Bank Operations Portal, across all geographical regions. To determine whether a program focused on economic inclusion, the PEIMT reviewed each program's development objective and the component description included in its Project Appraisal Document (PAD) or, when a PAD was not available, its Project Information Document (PID), Project Paper (PP), or Project Information and Integrated Safeguards Data Sheet (PSDS).

Sampling

Sampling Procedure

To map the universe of economic inclusion programs, the PEIMT reviewed the World Bank financing portfolio as well as external sources. The first stage of the World Bank portfolio scan involved manually reviewing ongoing and pipeline projects from the Social Protection and Jobs (SPJ) Global Practice, listed in the World Bank Operations Portal, across all geographical regions. To determine whether a program focused on economic inclusion, the PEIMT reviewed each project's development objective and the component description included in its Project Appraisal Document (PAD) or, when a PAD was not available, its Project Information Document (PID), Project Paper (PP), or Project Information and Integrated Safeguards Data Sheet (PSDS).

As a second stage, in order to validate each economic inclusion program and to speed up the mapping process, the PEIMT worked with the Text and Data Analytics (TDA) team from the Development Economics (DEC) department of the World Bank. Using a predefined set of keywords, the TDA team applied advanced text analytics to projects' summaries as well as to their PADs, PIDs, PPs, or PSDSs. They applied this technique to a total sample of approximately 1,200 projects (both active and pipeline) across all geographical regions under these Global Practices: Urban Resilience and Land; Social Development; Social Protection and Jobs; Finance, Competitiveness and Innovation; and Agriculture and Food. The team then ranked projects based on the number of keywords found. Any project that had at least one keyword could be considered an economic inclusion project. The PEIMT then compared the TDA-assisted selection with the manual selection for the SPJ projects and found that the results were accurate in correctly excluding projects. The TDA-assisted selection, however, also included far more projects than the manual review did.

To finalize the mapping of World Bank-financed economic inclusion projects, the PEIMT team manually reviewed the TDA-assisted selection of economic inclusion projects for the remaining Global Practices. The team assessed the relevance of a project based on project summaries, the types of words identified through the TDA techniques, and the frequency with which keywords came up in the project documents. In some cases, when a summary did not provide enough information, the PAD was reviewed to make a final decision. Overall, the TDA methods allowed the PEIMT to trim the number of projects for review by half. In total, the PEIMT identified 149 World Bank economic inclusion projects (representing 92 individual government programs in 57 countries). Surveys were sent to these 92 unique identified programs, and responses were received back from 77 of them. The mapping of World Bank-supported projects was updated in June 2020 through a full manual review of nearly 50 projects from the Environment and Natural Resources Global Practice, which resulted in 17 additional projects and a total of 166 economic inclusion projects supported by the World Bank.

To map projects outside of World Bank operations, the PEIMT used the PEI's 2017 survey dataset to identify projects that were still ongoing as well as partners, including governments, NGOs, regional organizations, multilaterals, and other development partners involved in economic inclusion programming. Organizations were approached to self-identify programs that met a prescribed set of criteria, which had been developed based on the working definition of economic inclusion programs. Since the 2017 survey captured mostly non-government programs, in order to map other relevant economic inclusion interventions the PEIMT scanned several databases and inventories of social protection and productive inclusion programs, including ECLAC's database of labor and productive inclusion programs in Latin America and the Caribbean and Manchester's Social Assistance database. The number of projects identified outside of the World Bank portfolio totaled 146, from which 140 responses were expected and 127 responses were received.

Data Collection Notes

The survey was completed by staff from the lead implementing agency, implementing partners, or other organizations providing support to programs. It was made available in English, French, and Spanish through an online platform. An offline version was provided to programs that could not complete the survey online. Each returned survey represented a unique program; organizations that were involved in more than one economic inclusion program filled out several surveys.

The survey was administered between November 2019 and January 2020, with an update in June 2020. This involved reaching out to economic inclusion program representatives, soliciting survey responses, following up with emails and phone calls, and assisting with survey completion, as needed.

Data was self-reported, so data quality relied primarily on respondents' knowledge of the program and understanding of the survey questions. To ensure overall quality, the survey tool had several quality-control features embedded in its design and to further improve data accuracy, the PEIMT undertook a full quality review of all the forms, checked the completeness and consistency of survey responses during the survey data collection process and, where needed, followed up with survey respondents to request clarifications or additional information wherever data was missing or inconsistencies were found.

V493	iedes_quasi	type of impact evaluation - quasi-experimental	discrete	character	Types of impact evaluation design used (Select all that apply from the list provided) - Quasi-experimental approach (e.g. propensity score matching, instrumental variables, regression discontinuity, etc.)

V494	iedes_nonexp	type of impact evaluation - non-experimental	discrete	character	Types of impact evaluation design used (Select all that apply from the list provided) - Non-experimental (e.g. outcome mapping/harvesting, participatory evaluation, contribution analysis, stories of change, case studies etc.)
V495	ie_overall	aspects of impact evaluation - overall	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - OVERALL impact of program
V496	ie_dpop	aspects of impact evaluation - different populations	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - DIFFERENTIAL impact for DIFFERENT POPULATION GROUPS, e.g. different income groups, women vs. men, etc.
V497	ie_comp	aspects of impact evaluation - components	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - DIFFERENTIAL impact from varying program COMPONENTS, i.e. how impact varies when the type and/or intensity of components/intervention is modified
V498	ie_dseq	aspects of impact evaluation - sequence	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - DIFFERENTIAL impact from varying the SEQUENCE of implementing program components
V499	ie_scale	aspects of impact evaluation - scale	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - Impact of economic inclusion program IMPLEMENTED AT SCALE/proof of sustenance of pilot intervention impact, when implemented at scale
V500	ie_intergen	aspects of impact evaluation - intergenerational	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - INTERGENERATIONAL impact of economic inclusion programming
V501	ie_noncog	aspects of impact evaluation - non-cognitive	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - Effect of inherent NON-COGNITIVE skills on outcomes (extent of non-cognitive skills at time zero)
V502	ie_mktlink	aspects of impact evaluation - market linkages	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - Effect of MARKET LINKAGES on outcomes
V503	ie_othertopic	aspects of impact evaluation - other	discrete	character	Aspects that will be studies through the impact evaluation - Other
V504	results	results	discrete	character	Date when results publicly available (Provide for each of the research activities listed above)
V505	link	link	discrete	character	Please provide the link to any published research and/or evaluation report(s) you wish to share
V507	futscale	full scale	discrete	character	As you think about scale, briefly share ideas of how the program will evolve going forward
V508	addinfo	additional info	discrete	character	Please provide any additional information on the program that you wish to share and that has not been covered above

Interviewer instructions

Please refer to the definitions provided below and select all that apply from the list provided.

Poor: Those whose consumption is below the national poverty line, as defined by the government. Or those who, because of their personal and/or community characteristics, face barriers in accessing opportunities to earn sustainable livelihoods and have elevated risks of being/staying in poverty and/or being socially marginalized

Extreme poor: Those whose consumption is below the $1.90/day (2011 PPP - see conversion rates) who can work on a sustained basis. Also defined as the bottom 50% of the poor population in a country or those unable to meet basic needs.

Ultra-poor: Those whose consumption is below $0.95/day (2011 PPP- see conversion rates). Also defined as those experiencing the most severe forms of deprivation, e.g. persistently hungry, lack of sources of income, etc.

Other vulnerable: other groups that do not meet any of the above criteria, e.g. those just above the poverty line, marginalized groups irrespective of their poverty level, etc.
