Survey data files

The Harmonized Host and Refugee Labor Market Survey (HHR-LMS) in Ethiopia culminated in the final data set described in this documentation. The data is organized into three primary files, which pertain to households, household members (roster), and a randomly selected individual from each household. Each of these data files is documented to provide clear and comprehensive information.

The household file contains general information about the households surveyed, including their socio-economic and demographic characteristics, as well as their living conditions. This file serves as a foundation for understanding the context in which the household members and selected individuals operate.

The household members file, or roster, is a comprehensive list of all individuals residing in the surveyed households. It includes essential details such as each member's age, gender, relationship to the household head, education, and employment status. This file helps paint a broader picture of the household dynamics and provides a basis for analyzing the labor market's impact on various groups within the community.

Lastly, the individual file focuses on a randomly selected individual from each household. This file delves deeper into the specific labor market experiences and outcomes of these individuals, examining their employment history, job characteristics, earnings, and other work-related aspects. By analyzing this information, researchers can gain valuable insights into the labor market's functioning and the effects of forced displacement on both host communities and refugee populations.

The file names and the number of cases are presented in the table below. The files are available in both SPSS and Stata software formats.
